Prague, January 1997

The Prague Funfair Orchestra first performed at the Prague Castle on the occasion of Václav Havel's election as President of the Republic in 1990. Since that time they have appeared at a number of cultural, social and official events, such as the international scientists' congress, the international film festival, the anniversary to celebrate fifty years since the end of the World War I or the gala evening with Prince Charles held during his visit to Prague. This orchestra comprising professional musicians performs Czech folk songs, jazz, special arrangements of Classical works and its own songs. Their appearance on Hradcanská square in front of the first castle courtyard became a tourist attraction for both Czech and foreign visitors to Prague Castle.
